He found the town in a rapid state of improvement, a large number of houses going up, among them a $25,000 stone Catholic church, and a vast amount of business. The most prominent of the business men were the Naill Brothers, who are handling on an average 2,000 bushels of wheat daily at their large elevator. While in Chapman he added twenty names to the already large dist of subscribers to the Reflector at that place, with the promise of as many more when he calls again.
